The surreal experience of being able to capture people in their element, as they light up against the canvas of nature, speaks happiness to me. The moment I captured the photograph, a sense of deep peace poured from it and settled upon me. It almost felt like a revelation; after all, our connection with the sindhuri sarees is primary. I wasn't seeking this experience, but it happened. In a way, it was profound. It is the unanticipated emotion of noticing the world that brings me happiness. That is why, I am always looking to capture that split second and keep it safe with me. *
