The traditions, customs, and culture of India are something to take pride in. People respect and adore their fashion and about knowing their a little history is something every Indian will go through. It was probably during the time of the British that Indian dress culture got into the hands of the British and started to change. Through the time, the style of the dress has changed a lot, but it is still a part of the Indian culture. The style of the dress has changed a lot, but it is still a part of the Indian culture. The traditions, customs, and culture of India are something to be proud of. People respect and adore each tradition and custom because from a simple saree to wearing ever-lasting silk saris, to wear jewelry, every state of India has their own unique expression for color, style, and the beauty and elegance. Though we have many more than 2000 different kinds of sarees throughout the country, the style of an saree has a story to tell. A story to remember and a feeling attached to it. When you look about India, the color, contrast and beautiful style of the Indian saree is again. Though time is changing, culture has remained the same. The style of an saree is the story of the Indian tradition. The way we wear sarees has changed a lot but the appreciation for the style has always been there. The saree is a symbol of Indian culture and tradition. The style has always been there to inspire, generation to generation. But today, the saree has become a part of the fashion of India.

The traditions, customs, and culture of India are something to take pride in. People respect and cherish their traditions with great solemnity. From a simple sari made of cotton or silk fabric with borders to more intricate, ornate saris of silk and cotton, there is a wide variety of saris, colors, and the borders are made with gold. Through the centuries, the saris have evolved and changed throughout the world, the style of the saris has changed a lot, but the essence of being draped in a sari has always remained the same. The saris worn today are more ornate than ever before, and the borders are made of gold and silver. The saris are now more colorful and vibrant, but the essence of being draped in a sari has always remained the same. The traditions, customs, and culture of India are something to take pride in. Please respect and cherish each tradition with utmost gratitude. There is a unique beauty in celebrating every festival and celebrating it with joyfully, sincerely, believing in ones own culture. Also, Indian traditions like music, history, and the festivals that associate with them. Though we can't see them every day, but we feel them through the beauty of our cities. It is not just a festival to celebrate but a heavy attached to it. When you take about this, the most considerate and beautiful side of the India get in eyes. Though times changed, customs have passed, but what hasn't changed is the spirit of the Indian festival. There is the very reason across the country that our culture is irreplaceable and it's very different from region to region. Generations to generations our beauty has not disappeared, just with the changes of time.
